

Integrated Master's Program: A seamless start to your US master's program

What is the Integrated Master's Program (IMP)?

UAB's Integrated Master's Program (IMP) is designed for graduate students who meet direct entry English requirements, but need additional academic support, during their first semester at UAB. With more accessible entry requirements and a semester-long program tailored to help graduate students succeed, students can put their best foot forward when starting their master's program in the US.

A stress-free and test-free application process

IMP's entry requirements are simple and more accessible than standalone direct entry. All students have to do is meet a minimum GPA requirement, with no testing needed.

- No GRE or GMAT required
- 2.5 GPA

Single-semester program dedicated to your success

IMP is just one semester long and consists of four courses: three that count toward your degree and a fourth that focuses on graduate research, academic success skills and how to navigate the US higher education system.

After just one semester, students will automatically continue with their program as long as they're in good academic standing.

“ Applying to UAB IMP was a very simple and stress-free experience for me. The INTO UAB IMP program offers students a lot of resources and help in whichever field they require ... IMP provided me with the opportunity to meet with a lot of international students, interact with them and learn a lot about their language and their cultures, which I think is going to help me a lot in my professional life. ”
